This intensive workshop will offer participants a thorough immersion in the central practices of narrative therapy, including application of the micro maps of narrative practice as described by Michael White.

Shona will use illustrations from her own work along with structured exercises and group discussion.

The emphasis will be on developing skills in using the narrative approach and understanding how this might apply in a variety of settings.

An energetic and rigorous introduction to Narrative Practice, that will leave participants keen to explore more. All of the central practices of the narrative approach (as described by Michael White) will be explored, along with an accessible introduction to the thinking that informs the practice. This introduction is relevant for a range of contexts, including counselling, groups and communities.

The course will include explorations of:

- Key ideas of narrative therapy
- Locating narrative therapy in a context
- The narrative metaphor and how stories shape us
- A review of the micro maps of narrative therapy
- The role of externalising conversations with individuals, families and groups
- Re- Authoring conversations through rich story development
- Intentional understandings of identity
- Creating an audience for preferred story development
- The narrative approach in work with individuals, families, groups and communities.

Narrative Practices Adelaide Faculty Members

SHONA RUSSELL has worked as a teacher of narrative therapy and community work for many years. She finds the intersection of therapeutic work and teaching very energising and enjoys these explorations with workshop participants.

MAGGIE CAREY has practiced narrative therapy since the early 90s. She has worked alongside young people at risk, with women and children who live with the effects of violence and abuse, and with people having experienced trauma, particularly as refugees.

ROB HALL has been working in the area of gender violence and abuse since 1980. Rob continues to seek ways of ensuring that intervention with people who have perpetrated abuse is practiced in ways that promote, responsibility, respect, fairness and accountability.

LISA JOHNSON is a psychologist and teacher with a passionate interest in helping to uncover people's own knowledge and skills. She has a particular interest in supporting people responding to experiences of disability and neurodiversity.

TERRY CALLAHAN has worked in non-government community settings for more than ten years, attending to a wide range of counselling needs, including depression, anxiety, work-related stress, and community concerns about violence in families and relationships.

About Narrative Practices Adelaide

Narrative Practices Adelaide has its history based in the ADELAIDE NARRATIVE THERAPY CENTRE (ANTC), the centre that Michael White established in January 2008, a few months before his sad and untimely death in April 2008. From its inception Maggie Carey, Rob Hall and Shona Russell, joined Michael in the formation and early development of ANTC.

After Michael's death, Maggie, Shona and Rob formed Narrative Practices Adelaide in order to continue with Michael's aims and intentions in a way that would fit with the sentiment of what he had proposed. We see ourselves as a small, vibrant centre that collaborates with other centres and that acknowledges the rich and varied history of Michael's work.

Maggie and Shona have been involved in the teaching of narrative therapy and community work for many years, both in Australia and internationally. This is an aspect of their work that they value highly and that they look forward to continuing.

Maggie, Shona and Rob have all taught for many years as facilitators for the Diploma of Narrative Approaches for Aboriginal people (counselling, group and community work), a TAFE accredited diploma that is run through the Regional Centre at Nunkuwarrin Yunti of South Australia.

Lisa Johnson and Terry Callahan joined the teaching faculty of Narrative Practices Adelaide in 2013.
